WHEELING, NOVEMBER 7, 1894.

A Great Triumph.

The West Virginia legislature will be Republican beyond doubt, and a rock-ribbed, copper-bottomed protectionist will succeed Mr. Camden. This is a great triumph.

EVERYTHING points to the election of solid Republican congressional delegation in West Virginia. It was great Republican weather.

The Proudest Achievement.

The defeat of William L. Wilson is assured, and it is the proudest of yesterday's achievements. He did not pretend to represent the district which elected him, and the district has turned against him. He and his friends saw what was coming although they did not admit it, and they talked about "Republican boodle." The fact is that they had and they used very much more than the Republicans had. The Republicans did not have enough under ordinary circumstances to make a thorough organization of a district embracing 6,000 square miles. But men who believed in the policy of protection, who had felt the pinch of the policy of free trade, left their business and enlisted in the volunteers to strike a blow for the American fireside. Under a gallant young leader, who never rested after the standard of protection had been placed in his hand, they went to the polls and routed the free trade forces under the leadership of the field marshal of free trade in the United States. It was reserved for West Virginia, a southern state, to achieve this signal triumph and to break the solid south. The protectionists of the district have fought a national battle and won it with everlasting credit to themselves.

THEY arrested Morton's coachman, but they couldn't arrest the Morton movement in the great state of New York.

THEY tried to break the line of our colored troops, but they stood up to their work, a solid phalanx, and fought nobly.

THE sheep took a hand in the fight and vindicated their right to live in this land of the free and home of the brave.

MORTON is a good deal of a man himself, David Burglar Hill has made this interesting discovery.

MR JULIUS POLLOCK is a very nice man but he can't go to the state senate from the First district.

NEW YORK has made a clean job of it—Tammany and Hillman are routed on the first charge.

HURRAH for Union district. The people out there can see through the hole in a millstone.

THE wage-earners of Wheeling know when they are pinched, and who pinches them.

THE people have a way of getting their work in on a party which uses them badly.

THE Register will have lots of fun abusing United States Senator Stephen B. Elkins.

AFTER this readers of the Register may get correct quotations of the wool market.

CAPTAIN DOVENER made a splendid canvass and earns a splendid victory.

THE Tammany tiger is slain by the strong arm of the people's champion.

HILL will defend Cleveland some more when Congress meets again.

THE Register should try its hand at another mud-slinging campaign.

THE American people went on strike and won it in one short round.

MR. WILLIAM LONDON WILSON may go there for some more dinners.

CAPT. DOVENER is called to Washington on important business.

It's a pity about the way they were going to "do up" Dovener.

It is a clean sweep in Ohio county. Let all the bands play.

THE earth is ours and the fullness thereof.

ALL this will interest Mr. Cleveland.

THE flag of protection is still there.

AND Dayton was no joke.

AND that day it snowed.

OUR coon is all right.

Trouble in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—Serious trouble occurred at the town of Lamont, on the draining canal. Through a clerical error, an insufficient number of ballots was sent to the place and the canal laborers angered at the oversight, gathered in a disorderly crowd and announced that they intended to vote whether they had ballots or not. Sixty deputy sheriffs were hurried to the scene and it was thought the force would be sufficient to quell the disturbance.

It was no easy task to arouse the heavy respectability of the first of American cities. It had not only to be shown that it had been abused and wronged; it had to be shown that it was being plundered right and left. Then it girded on its armor and went in with a serious purpose.

But it was not enough to arouse the heavy respectability. The common people, who determine elections, had to be moved. The investigation moved them by showing that nobody was too poor or too lowly to be blackmailed and forced to pay tribute to the Tammany machine. It required such a stirring up as the investigation caused to get public sentiment on fire and to drive the tiger out of his lair.

The victory is creditable to the people of New York, and is an encouragement to the people of every misgoverned city, and most American cities are misgoverned. If New York can be wrenched from the control of the bandits who had it in their grip there is hope for every other city in the land.

THE handsome majority given to Mr. Whitaker for state senate shows that workingmen are not ungrateful to an employer who treats them well. The men who are employed by Mr. Whitker are his friends, and as his friends they not only gave him a loyal support but took occasion to show that they resented the nasty fight that was made on him by the Democratic organ and other similar influences.

THE state of William McKinley is all right. So is McKinley.

Dayton Wins Against Heavy Odds. The administration did all it could for Mr. Wilson. The free traders, particularly the importers, poured their money into the district. The people could not be caught by the offices the administration had to give and they could not be bought with the money of importers. They knew that they had been discriminated against in favor of foreigners and they rebuked the party which had mistreated them. They struck for their altars and their fires.

TAMMANY was the strength of the Democracy in the state of New York. The Democracy of the state of New York has been a powerful factor in the nation. The routing of Tammany looks very much like the breaking of the Democratic backbone.

It looks as though we have the legislature on joint ballot, in spite of what Mr. Camden called the Democratic "arrangement." A Republican legislature means a protectionist to succeed Mr. Camden in the United States senate.

THE board of commissioners of Ohio county will continue to be Republican, but by an increased Republican majority. There will be two Democrats on a board of ten in this county that used to be Democratic.

EVERYTHING points to a legislature Republican on joint ballot. We have reached a point in West Virginia where the Democrats do not know which way to turn to juggle the state.

If it had been a presidential year West Virginia would have cast her vote for the Republican nominee. The solid south is broken and West Virginia is the record breaker.

"THE people" were very numerous about the INTELLIGENCER office in the pleasant hours of last evening. And they felt that it was good to be there.

ALTHOUGH there was no state fight and no particular reason to get out the vote Ohio runs up a tidy majority for protection herself.

If the Register had fought Whitaker a little harder and with a little more meanness his majority would have been larger.

THEY arrested Morton's coachman, but they couldn't arrest the Morton movement in the great state of New York.

THEY tried to break the line of our colored troops, but they stood up to their work, a solid phalanx, and fought nobly.

THE sheep took a hand in the fight and vindicated their right to live in this land of the free and home of the brave.

HOW AN AMERICAN STUDENT

Had an Unpleasant Adventure in Germany.

R. Barclay Spicer, son of Simon Spicer, of Baltimore, who is a student at the university at Leipzig, Germany, gives in a letter to his father an account of his arrest on the charge of murder and the subsequent discomfiture of the men who arrested him. He was formerly a student at Johns Hopkins university, and last March he went to Germany to study. Arriving in Germany, he went thence to Breslau, where he studied at the university until the summer vacation. He then started on a walking tour through the country.

While in the mountains of Silesia he stopped one day before a blacksmith's shop and read an account of the murder of a woman and her son, from a poster on the door, and the statement that a large reward would be paid for the arrest of the murderer. After reading the poster he resumed his journey. Soon afterward he passed two peasants sitting by the roadside eating luncheon. He spoke to them, received a grunt by way of reply. Then he passed on, but he had gone only a short distance when he was stopped by a call from the men. He waited until they came up to him, and they demanded to see his passport.

The young Baltimorean informed them that his passport was at the inn at the village where he was stopping, but he showed them his police papers, which he always carried with him. The men refused to be satisfied with the police papers and said he must go along with them to a police station to be held on the charge of committing the murder. Finding that he could not convince the men that he was a peaceable citizen, he consented to go with them. They then attempted to tie his hands behind him, but he kept them away with his cane. One of the men managed to fasten a strap around one of his legs, and in this condition he was conducted back to the village. He was taken to an inn and was guarded by one of his captors while the other went to inform the police.

The police came in a large body and surrounded the inn before several of their number entered the office where Mr. Spicer was seated. They searched him and took his money, watch and all the papers which he had about him. When the chief of police saw his police pass he said that it was found to be a forgery, and returned him his money. The chief of police said that the matter would have to be settled by a higher power, and Mr. Spicer was detained at the inn until the next day. By that time a friend of his had learned of his arrest, secured his passport and taken them to a magistrate, who was to decide what was to be done in the matter. The papers were found to be all right and Mr. Spicer was released from custody. Then the police put in jail both the men who had arrested Mr. Spicer. The Baltimorean continued his tramp through the mountains and in September went to Leipzig, where he entered the university.

GRANDMOTHER'S CLOAK.

Mary Ridley Corley, in Evening Wisconsin. Cut and rip it, each distant thread; Many years since the needle was sped, Field by the fingers now nerveless and cold, Pressing it, plaining it, fold upon fold; Smooth it out softly in this latter day, Fashion it deftly and quaint, modern way, Tenderly touch its soft surface of brown, Grandmother's cloak is her granddaughter's gown.

See! I am dressed with a robe in my hair—Grandmother, dear, do you know, do you care? Out of the realms of silence and shade Can you look down at the gown I have made? Can you remember when you, too, were young, Setting the fashions the earth folks among? Little you dreamed that your warm cloak of brown Years would turn into a granddaughter's gown. Grandmother, grandmother, when you were young, Came to you ever, with flattering tongue, One who bent low with a smile, to compare Soft damask cheeks to the rose in your hair—"Sweeter than roses in Paradise grow?" Did he go off with the rose at his own? Waiting I stand, with a smile and a frown, Doubting and glad, in my sweet modish gown. What were the dearest of words ever said? Were the skies bright on the day you were wed? Did all your fair, loving dreams come to pass, Ere you lay down under the green, growing grass? Happy and faithful and tender and true! May time be as gentle to me as to you, And all homely virtues and graces come down Like sweet olden scents, for the granddaughter's gown.
